*The exhibition space is a labyrinth.

*The modern-day kabukimonos photographed here do not represent heretics or freaks, but they represent shamans who bring blessings and prayers to this megalopolis where spirits have long ceased to call to humans.

*The audience circulates between the portrayed people, going back and forth and finally arriving at a small room.

*In the small room a fountain is installed to represent a spring, which is the place where spirits call to humans. Beneath the fountain will be a slide show projecting over 500 Star of the Stars.

*As the audience experience mysteries in the labyrinth, they will also experience death and reincarnation of the megalopolis.
